

DISSINGTON HALL
Exclusively yours

A little history...

Dissington Hall is set in a rural location only 9 miles from Newcastle City Centre and was built in 1797 for Edward Collingwood, cousin of Admiral Lord Collingwood. The Architect was William Newton. The Hall was central to a large private estate until World War II, and was the home of some important local families including Bainbridge and Deuchar. The current owners, the Brown family opened the Hall for weddings in 1992.
